"Expanding the use of electronic prescribing by doctors and nurses in hospitals will help the NHS save lives and save money."

Professor Sir Bruce Keogh, Medical Director of NHS England, May 2013

"Studies show electronic prescribing can cut prescription errors – which can be present in as many as 8% of hospital prescriptions – by up to 50%" NHS England May 2013

"NHS Trust Boards are reminded that the impetus for renewed focus on the benefits of ePrescribing is to improve quality of care, reduce opportunity for error and enable communication of essential information across systems" Safer hospitals, safer wards: Achieving and integrated digital care record, NHS England July 2013

"Today I want to argue that we need to go much further, much faster. So today I am setting a new ambition for the NHS. I want it to become paperless by 2018. The most modern digital health service in the world. Patients will be at the heart of this change" Jeremy Hunt, Health Secretary 15 January 2013

Jeremy Hunt, Health Secretary announced that the NHS is to become paperless by 2018 and focused on electronic prescribing as a key element of this approach. In May 2013 the £260 million technology fund was announced to support trusts to move from paper-based systems for patient notes and prescriptions to integrated electronic care records and the development of e-prescribing and e-referral systems. The conference will focus on the use of electronic prescribing and medicines administration as part of the paperless NHS.

This conference looks at moving forward with Electronic Prescribing and Medicines Administration (EPMA) in a hospital setting. Electronic Prescribing has the potential to support the medicines use process that can be delivered at every stage from prescribing to administration. Electronic Prescribing can provide management of prescriptions and will also give immediate access to medicines information.

The conference will open with a focus on the role of Electronic Prescribing in delivering the Paperless NHS by 2018 including a where electronic prescribing fits into electronic patient records. The sessions will provide delegates with the understanding of how to implement Electronic Prescribing by focusing on topics such as developing the business case for Electronic Prescribing and learning from experienced implementers. There will be case studies on Electronic Prescribing which will highlight the clinical benefits and engaging the clinical staff. Delegates will also have an opportunity to hear from other healthcare experts who will look into different strategies for implementation of Electronic Prescribing.
