Stroke and Aneurysm Update 2014

OVERVIEW

This course will provide a forum for existing best practices, guidelines, algorithms, and resources on the management of ischemic stroke, intracerebral hemorrhage, and subarachnoid hemorrhage to be appraised and discussed, as well as an opportunity to develop a plan for individual and team practice improvement. Specifically, it will address new imaging techniques for cerebral ischemia, new therapeutic approaches to AVMs, imaging and hemodynamics in aneurysm formation, evidence-based stroke care including management of ischemic stroke, intracerebral hemorrhage, and subarachnoid hemorrhage, updates on treatment of TIA and minor stroke, critical care for complex neurovascular patients, surgical and endovascular treatments, and the future of stroke rehabilitation.

TARGET AUDIENCE

Designed for health care team professionals who often are the first to come in contact with patients with unknown neurological disorders and care providers from Primary Care, Emergency Medicine, Neurology, Radiology, Neurointerventional Radiology, Neurosurgery, and Nursing and Rehabilitation.

OBJECTIVES

An attendee completing this course will be able to:

- Apply current best practices for managing patients with complex cerebrovascular diseases such as ischemic stroke, intracerebral hemorrhage, subarachnoid hemorrhage, AVM, and aneurysms;
- Identify and evaluate key updates and advances in stroke, AVM, and aneurysm treatment, prevention, and recovery;
- Define key challenges in optimizing care for complex cerebrovascular disease;
- Develop and assess strategies to enhance individual and team collaboration for the clinical care of patients with ischemic stroke, subarachnoid hemorrhage, and intracerebral hemorrhage.
