Thursday 13 November 2014 Hallam Conference Centre, London

Sepsis is responsible for 37,000 deaths annually in the UK, and accounts for 30-50% of episodes of inpatient deterioration. Despite internationally recognized guidelines being endorsed by relevant professional bodies, standards of care are achieved in fewer than 20% of cases.

Evidence in support of basic elements of care- antibiotics and fluid challenges- suggests that they are more effective and their delivery more time critical than interventions in acute coronary syndrome. This Masterclass will explore evidence behind interventions, barriers to reliable delivery and solutions in the context of the updated 2012 Surviving Sepsis Campaign guidelines. The roles of individual health professionals within acute hospitals, the community and the prehospital environment will be explored to aid understanding and planning of a system-wide response. The day will also outline national and global strategies to embed sepsis as a clinical priority for health systems.

The facilitator for the masterclass is Dr Ron Daniels. Ron is a Consultant in Anaesthesia and Critical Care at Heart of England NHS Foundation Trust.

Ron has been a member of the Surviving Sepsis Campaign for the United Kingdom since its launch in 2004 and Chair since 2006. He is Chief Executive of the Global Sepsis Alliance and sits on the Global Sepsis as an Emergency Committee. In this role, he is working with the World Health Organization to raise the profile of sepsis in the context of other infection management initiatives. He is Chief Executive of the United Kingdom Sepsis Trust. He is also a member of the NHS Institute's Safer Care Faculty, a Fellow of the NHS Improvement Faculty, and Founder and Programme Director of the education initiative, Survive Sepsis, from which the Sepsis Six treatment pathway originates and which is in place at over 100 organisations. Ron's primary interest lies in systems and process improvement to increase the reliability of delivery of basic interventions in sepsis, and is committed to the establishment of collaborative unplanned care pathways between primary and secondary care.
