Aging Life Care™ Essentials: Section One – Clinical & Ethical

Pre-Conference Intensive

Separate Fee & Registration Required

Aging Life Care™ is a complex process that integrates areas as diverse as human development, health, mental health, family dynamics, community resources, law, finance, culture, and spirituality. It's also about the way the professional utilizes themselves in multidimensional roles to facilitate cohesion across settings, services, organizations, entitlements, family members, and community. It is therefore imperative that the Aging Life Care Professionals have a suite of knowledge, skills, competencies, and resources to deliver high-quality services to clients, employers, and constituents. These talents also need to be grounded in a code of ethics and standards of practice that represent principles of conduct when confronted with ethical and/or business dilemmas. This session will explore ALCA's Code of Ethics and Standards of Practice, while discussing the clinical issues that frequently arise in Aging Life Care practices. During this interactive session we will use actual case histories to explore clinical approaches to meeting client needs and resolving common ethical challenges that arise within this process. Aging Life Care is not just a business – it shapes the lives of people for generations to come!

Working Through Menopause: The Impact on Women, Businesses, and The Bottom Line

When his wife had surgery that threw her into early menopause only months after a study incorrectly reported that estrogen caused breast cancer, her doctors were reluctant to treat her with hormone therapy. He HAD to find out the truth. As a result, Dr. Mache transitioned from one of the leading fertility experts to researching estrogen and menopause. He's passionate about working with business and professional women and women executives struggling with their midlife transition who want to take back control of their life, their work, and their relationships. Midlife women represent one-fourth of the workforce worldwide. During this session Dr. Mache will shine a light on a glaring deficiency in the workplace hidden in plain sight and impacting women, businesses, and the bottom line. It will help you discover what can and should be done to make the workplace a better, more productive menopause experience.

The Importance of Being an Elder

Aging in Western cultures means you become "elderly," which connotes LOSS: of purpose, power and prestige. When you regard yourself as An Elder, instead of Elderly, you see completely different possibilities emerge that guide your aging experience. An Elder appreciates and cherishes a life of experience and shares wisdom that can be valuable to and guide others. An Elder sees the "Integrative Whole" of life through the expansiveness of the aging process and shares this perspective with others whose perspective is guided by limiting beliefs.
