Course Objectives & CME Information

Course Objectives of The Edge: Spring Seminar 2015

1. Increase clinical knowledge of emergency medicine through an innovative mixture of lectures and hands-on workshops on practical and administrative processes.
2. Develop and improve basic skills utilized by emergency medicine practitioners in emergency medicine settings.
3. Create an environment in which young physicians will develop presentation and research skills through a series of competitive venues.
4. Review the most up-to-date literature on various topics of emergency medicine.

“I thought the topics were great and the speakers excellent. First time to this conference and will attend again.”

*Christopher Colbert, DO
The Edge: Spring Seminar
Course Chair*

FOEM Faculty Development Track

Part I: The Introduction to Research

Thursday, April 9th, 7:30 am - 3:00 pm

Part II: Developing Research

Friday, April 10th, 7:30 am - 3:00 pm

“Research has the power to improve patient care and raise the standards of medical education in the ED. Give yourself the best tools to conduct meaningful research, and to give the physicians in your hospital the guidance they need.”

FOEM and ACOEP are proud to present the Faculty Development Track! This invaluable tool trains current and prospective core faculty members in effective ways to incorporate research into their programs.

If you missed the first course at The Edge: Scientific Assembly 2014, you're in luck! FOEM will offer an encore presentation of Part One, The Introduction to Research. Topics include an introduction to the FOEM Research Network, formulating a research concept, creating a teaching environment in residency training, and adapting medical curriculum.

Once you have completed The Introduction to Research, further develop your skills with the second portion of this series, Developing Research. In this course, leading experts will discuss the complexities of grant writing, developing inter-institution research projects, and ethical questions surrounding research.

Register for one or both parts and get the training you need to get in-depth, meaningful research off the ground!

Events, dates and times are subject to change.
