About Your Simulation Course

This program is designed to provide an interactive experience in the management of perioperative medical crises. Details of medical management will be discussed, as well as proper crisis management behaviors. This six-hour course format includes a one-hour orientation followed by a series of immersive OR simulations. In each scenario, one participant will act as the main anesthesia provider in the management of a simulated perioperative crisis.

A second participant will be the person who responds if help is required. Other participants will play a role in the clinical scenario, such as scrub tech or circulating nurse. Scenarios will be recorded and reviewed immediately afterwards. Before adjourning, each participant will complete a practice improvement plan. 30 days later, the American Society of Anesthesiologists will contact you with a follow-up evaluation to complete MOCA® part

IV Credit.
