This Conference is for You

This conference is designed for community based oncologists, oncology nurses, physician assistants and nurse practitioners working in community cancer centers.

Learning Objectives

Upon the completion of this activity, participants should be better able to:

- Describe where and how checkpoint inhibitors exert their effects on the immune system, allowing them to attack tumor cells and provide robust and often long-term responses in patients being treated for advanced cancers
- Select the appropriate agent for patients with NSCLC, melanoma, bladder, prostate, or renal cell carcinoma, depending on setting and previous treatment
- Describe current recommendations about molecular testing and other biomarker studies in patients with advanced/metastatic solid tumors
- Apply immune-related response criteria to characterize response to checkpoint inhibitor therapy in different tumor types
- Recognize and know how to mitigate adverse effects related to specific classes of anticancer agents used in patients with advanced solid tumors

Accreditation Statements

PHYSICIANS

This activity has been planned and implemented in accordance with the Essential Areas and Policies of the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCME) through the joint providership of the University of Louisville and Global Academy for Medical Education.

The University of Louisville is accredited by the ACCME to provide continuing education for physicians.

The University of Louisville Office of Continuing Medical Education & Professional Development designates this live activity for a maximum of 6.5 AMA PRA Category 1 Credits™. Physicians should only claim credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.

NURSES

Postgraduate Institute for Medicine is accredited with distinction as a provider of continuing nursing education by the American Nurses Credentialing Center's Commission on Accreditation.

This educational activity for 6.5 contact hours is provided by Postgraduate Institute for Medicine.

Pharmacotherapy contact hours for Advanced Practice Registered Nurses will be designated on your certificate.
