WELCOME

On behalf of the American Association of Endocrine Surgeons, we invite all of you to attend this year's Annual Meeting, scheduled for April 10-12 in Baltimore, MD.

Dear Registrants,

The American Association of Endocrine Surgeons was founded as a place for colleagues to meet, work together, and educate one another about endocrine diseases. The highlight is our annual meeting. The camaraderie and intellectual exchanges are outstanding. It is by far my favorite meeting. This year, the AAES has endeavored to expand the program to include more work focused on outcomes and health services research.

We are moving ahead with planning now for our 2016 gathering in Baltimore, MD. We are counting on you to submit your best work, and to come to Baltimore ready to participate!

In addition to interesting cases, poster presentations, exhibits, and oral presentations, there will be plenty of networking opportunities. Some 2016 meeting highlights include:

- > Steven Rosenberg, MD, PhD – Dr. Rosenberg pioneered the development of immunotherapies and gene therapies for patients with advanced cancers, in particular using genetically modified lymphocytes to treat metastatic melanoma, sarcoma, and lymphomas. Dr. Rosenberg will deliver the President's Invited Lecture.
- > Samuel A. Wells, Jr., MD – Dr. Wells is the former Chair of the Washington University Department of Surgery and one of the giants in the treatment of patients with medullary thyroid cancer. Dr. Wells will deliver the Historical Lecture.
- > Presidential Lunch Workshop – A world-renowned panel of experts will discuss the importance of and how to establish enduring multidisciplinary collaborations.
- > CESQIP Update – A report and guide of how to become involved in our society's quality improvement program.

And don't miss the special pre-meeting workshop on Sunday hosted by the AAES Outcomes Group. They will discuss critical statistical tools, valuable resources for those who want to engage in outcomes research, and how to utilize large databases among many other great topics. This workshop will be a tremendous opportunity to learn more about conducting and interpreting high-level outcomes research.

I hope that you are looking forward to the Baltimore meeting as much as I am.

Please make your plans now to join us in Maryland.

Sincerely,

Steven K. Libutti, MD
AAES President

The Collaborative Endocrine Surgery Quality Improvement Program [CESQIP]

was formed with the goal of improving patient care in the field of Endocrine Surgery. CESQIP utilizes concepts of continuous quality improvement to improve outcomes and optimize costs. This is accomplished through: patient-centered data collection, ongoing performance feedback to clinicians, and improvement based on analysis of collected data and collaborative learning.

WHY PARTICIPATE

- > Advance the quality of endocrine surgery by improving outcomes and decreasing costs.
- > Enable transition to shared accountability care/payment models.
- > Helps hospitals meet meaningful use and other regulatory/accreditation requirements such as PQRS and MOC Part IV.
- > Peer and institutional comparison review to improve the quality and safety of care.
- > Enable mitigation of clinical and cost variations.
- > Provides best practices, decision support and care pathways to enhance patient care and safety.
- > Improve surgical care decision making, increase throughput and deliver quick ROI.
- > Provide a platform for collaboration.
- > Data captured is more relevant to the practice of endocrine surgery.
- > Real-time access to dashboard reporting, drill down and data export capabilities.

To sign up for CESQIP please visit:
www.CESQIP.org

KEYNOTE SPEAKERS

HISTORICAL LECTURER

“The Diagnosis and Treatment of Thyroid Cancer: A Historical Perspective”

Sunday, April 10, 2016

1:50 pm – 2:35 pm

Samuel A. Wells, Jr., MD

Dr. Wells graduated from the Emory University School of Medicine and subsequently completed a residency in general surgery at the Duke University School of Medicine. He spent six years in basic laboratory investigation at the Surgery Branch of the National Cancer Institute (NCI), initially as a Clinical Associate and later as a Senior Investigator, and also in the Institute of Tumor Biology of the Karolinska Institute in Stockholm, Sweden, as a Guest Investigator. From 1981 to 1998 he served as the Chair of the Department of Surgery at the Washington University School of Medicine. He was the principal investigator and founder of the NCI funded American College of Surgeons Oncology Group and served as its first Chair from 1997 until 2005. He was also the founding Executive Director of the International Thyroid Oncology Group. His major interest is endocrine oncology, primarily the basic and clinical investigation of medullary thyroid cancer and the type 2 multiple endocrine neoplasia (MEN) syndromes. In 1993 and 1994 his group reported the discovery of the RET oncogene and its role in the initiation of MEN2A and MEN2B. This led to the practice of prophylactic thyroidectomy in children from MEN2 families who had inherited a mutated RET allele. More recently his group, in a phase III prospective, randomized, placebo controlled trial, demonstrated the efficacy of the tyrosine kinase inhibitor, vandetanib, in the treatment of patients with advanced medullary thyroid carcinoma. Vandetanib is the first molecular targeted therapeutic approved by the FDA for the treatment of a thyroid malignancy. Dr. Wells is currently an Adjunct Investigator in the Genetics Branch of the NCI.

PRESIDENT'S INVITED LECTURER

“The Curative Potential of T-cell Transfer Immunotherapy for Patients with Metastatic Cancer”

Monday, April 11, 2016 ■ 9:15 am – 10:00 am

Steven A. Rosenberg, MD, PhD

Dr. Rosenberg is Chief of Surgery at the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda, Maryland and a Professor of Surgery at the Uniformed Services University of Health Sciences and at the George Washington University School of Medicine and Health Sciences in Washington, D.C.

Dr. Rosenberg received his B.A. and M.D. degree at The Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Maryland and a Ph.D. in Biophysics at Harvard University. After completing his residency training in surgery in 1974 at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston, Massachusetts, Dr. Rosenberg became the Chief of Surgery at the National Cancer Institute, a position he has held to the present time.

Dr. Rosenberg has pioneered the development of immunotherapy that has resulted in the first effective immunotherapies for selected patients with advanced cancer. His studies of cell transfer immunotherapy have resulted in durable complete remissions in patients with metastatic melanoma. He has pioneered the development of gene therapy and was the first to successfully insert foreign genes into humans. His studies of the adoptive transfer of genetically modified lymphocytes resulted in the regression of metastatic cancer in patients with melanoma, sarcomas and lymphomas.

Dr. Rosenberg has been the recipient of numerous awards. He received the Meritorious Service Medal for the U.S. Public Health Service in 1981 and again in 1986, the Friedrich Sasse Prize from the University of West Berlin, Germany in 1986, the Nils Alwells Prize from Stockholm, Sweden in 1987, the Distinguished Alumnus Award from The Johns Hopkins University in 1987, The Griffuel Prize for Research from the French Association for Research on Cancer in 1988 and the Milken Family Foundation Cancer Award in 1988. Dr. Rosenberg twice received the Armand Hammer Cancer Prize “for pioneering work in cancer research” in 1985 and 1988. In 1991, he received the Karnofsky Prize, the highest honor given by the American Society of Clinical Oncology. In 1998, he was awarded the Ellis Island Medal of Honor. He received the John Wayne Award for Clinical Research from the Society of Surgical Oncology in 1996, the Flance-Karl Award, the highest honor accorded by the American Surgical Association in 2002, in 2003 he received the annual prize for scientific excellence in medicine from the American-Italian Cancer Foundation. In 2005 he received the Richard V. Smalley, MD, Memorial Award, the highest honor given by the International Society for Biological Therapy of Cancer. In 2010 he received the Karl Landsteiner Prize from the American Association of Blood Banks. In 2012 he won the Keio Medical Science Prize and in 2014, the Massry Prize. He received the Medal of Honor from the American Cancer Society in 2015.

Dr. Rosenberg is a member of the American Society of Clinical Oncology and served on its Board of Directors. He is also a member of the National Academy of Medicine, the Society of University Surgeons, the American Surgical Association, the American Association for Cancer Research, and the American Association of Immunologists among others. Dr. Rosenberg is the author of over 1100 articles in the scientific literature covering various aspects of cancer research and has authored 8 books.

A study published by the Institute for Scientific Information in May, 1999 revealed that Dr. Rosenberg was the most cited clinician in the world in the field of oncology for the 17 years between 1981 to 1998.

Chair, Local Arrangements Committee*

Join us for a top-notch, highly competitive scientific program developed by the 2016 AAES Program Committee. Topics will span all the aspects of endocrine surgical disease and contain a mix of basic, translational, and clinical work. The focal point of the program will be the top papers presented in the oral sessions, and the dynamic and collegial discussion that follows. Be sure to also attend the poster walk around session on Sunday morning. In addition to seeing many great projects, there will also be ample opportunity to meet and engage with the authors in person.

* SUBJECT TO CHANGE. ROOM ASSIGNMENTS MADE CLOSE TO CONFERENCE DATES & WILL BE LISTED ON FINAL PROGRAM.
