About the Conference

In lights of the global concern on the spread of infectious diseases, especially with the growing hesitancy associated with pediatric vaccination, the huge gap of awareness in adult vaccination, the challenge of managing immunocompromised and high risk patients, and other crucial issues affecting the healthcare sector in the Middle East, a need for a closer look into regional challenges and opportunities is much needed now more than any other time, for the welfare of the patient.

The Middle East Infectious Diseases Conference is designed to provide healthcare professionals involved in infectious diseases with up-to-date and evidence-based clinical data to highlight key solutions to the latest challenges faced by regional HCPs.

This conference will feature interactive case-studies, platform presentations, educational workshops, networking sessions, and more, to provide a comprehensive review of current issues and recent advances in selected ID topics.
