Delivering the 7 Day Health Service

Meeting the 10 National Clinical Standards & Learning from the Early Adopter Sites

Monday 9 November 2015 Hallam Conference Centre, London

"There's actually a big vision at the heart of this plan. A vision of a modern NHS working for you 7 days of the week – when you need it, where you need it... This 7-day NHS will be just as vital in our hospitals too. It's a shocking fact, but mortality rates for patients admitted to hospital on a Sunday can be 16% higher than on a Wednesday, while the biggest numbers of seriously ill patients arrive at the weekend when hospitals are least well equipped to handle them. So 7-day care isn't just about a better service – it's about saving lives. We simply can't aspire to be the safest health system in the world without this commitment. While our hospitals are working hard Monday to Friday to get patients better, sometimes it can feel as though Saturdays and Sundays are more about just somehow getting through to Monday. Diseases don't work weekdays 9 to 5. And neither can we. When you have sat through a night in the hospital watching a loved one and praying for the morning; when you have spent a weekend longing for the week – you know just how important these changes are. And let's be absolutely clear. This isn't about NHS staff working 7 days a week. It's about different shift patterns, so that our doctors and nurses are able to give that incredible care whenever it is needed. It's about key decision makers being around at the weekend; junior doctors being properly supported and resources like scanners up and running wherever they are needed."

Prime Minister David Cameron, 18th May 2015

Chaired by Dr Ann Driver, Head of Improvement Programmes, Acute Care at NHS Improving Quality, this conference concentrates on delivering the national priority of seven day NHS services, with a particular focus on hospitals and acute care. The conference opens with an update from NHS England on the development of 7 day services and progress within the early adopter sites. The conference will look at meeting the 10 national clinical standards for seven day services. NHS England have set down a requirement for at least five of the ten national seven day services standards to be implemented by March 2016, with compliance with the remaining five standards required from April 2017 onwards. Through national updates, and case studies from early adopter sites, the conference aims to enable you to meet the challenge of delivering your service on a full seven day basis.

"Patients need the NHS every day. Evidence shows that the limited availability of some hospital services at weekends can have a detrimental impact on outcomes for patients, including raising the risk of mortality. NHS England is committed to offering a much more patient-focussed service. Part of this commitment will be fulfilled by moving towards routine NHS services being made available seven days a week."
