

ABOUT SARVASUMANA:

Sarvasumana is a Sanskrit term which means good mind/good mental health for one and all. This forum aims to unite the mental health science with biological and health sciences so as to create an interdisciplinary approach to cater a holistic touch of sound health to the mankind for peace and happiness. Mental health subjects like psychology, psychotherapy, counseling, social work, parapsychology, psychiatry, clinical psychology can be linked with biological and health sciences like biotechnology, public health, computational biology, computational neurosciences, neuroscience, neurobiology, forensic science, biochemistry, medicinal chemistry, Ayurveda, yoga and homeopathy for this inter-disciplinary forum.

OVER VIEW OF THE CONFERENCE:

Health without mental health is of a lesser significance, both to individuals and to the larger society. Non-communicable diseases, including mental, neurological and substance use disorders are now established public health problems and require urgent policy and program interventions. Estimates indicate that nearly 70 to 100 million Indians require mental health services.

ICPMN-2014 brings together professionals and students from various disciplines in one platform to share their innovations, research findings, experiences to international audiences focusing on the Next Generation Mental Health and health sciences. The outcome of the conference will directly or indirectly contributes to the betterment of mental health globally including India.

Collaborating Institutions:

- ❖ Milton H. Erickson Institute of the California Central Coast, USA.
- ❖ Psychosocial Genomics Institute" California, USA.
- ❖ Post conference workshop in "School Psychology" in collaboration with School Psychology, India (for details refer website).
