Healthy Eating in Practice is a hands-on conference for practitioners, researchers, and influencers to empower the practice of healthcare to support healthy eating.

Who Should Attend? Physicians from all specialties, nurses, registered dietitian nutritionists, and other allied health professionals; hospital and insurance executives; nutrition and wellness educators; policy makers; and community leaders.

Come to Asheville. This popular culinary destination, nestled in the beautiful Blue Ridge Mountains, has a deeply rooted commitment to health and its connection to local food and farms. The historic Omni Grove Park Inn conference venue boasts an 18-hole Donald Ross-designed golf course, a 43,000-square-foot subterranean spa, world-class restaurants with panoramic mountain views, and many more luxury amenities.

Presented by ASAP (Appalachian Sustainable Agriculture Project) in partnership with Duke University World Food Policy Center and University of North Carolina Center for Health Promotion and Disease Prevention. For two decades, ASAP has been a leader in connecting communities to food and farms, simultaneously building markets for locally grown food, increasing access, and promoting positive relationships with healthy foods.
