Speaker

Lashea Wattie, MEd, MSN, RNC, C-EFM

Lashea has been practicing in the area of obstetrical nursing for nearly 20 years. Her clinical and educational experience and expertise span labor/delivery, antepartum and mother/baby areas. Lashea is currently working as the clinical nurse specialist for women's services at a large health system in Georgia. She is also a designated trainer in fetal monitoring instruction through AWHONN. Lashea has also worked as a nursing instructor and was the perinatal outreach educator for the north Georgia region. This allowed her to provide continual high-risk perinatal education to 36 different hospitals and to teach audiences across the region. Lashea holds two certifications through NCC and currently provides in-services and seminars nationally.

Course Description

This course will assist nurses in reviewing the basic knowledge of biological, physiological, psychological and sociocultural factors that influence the pregnant family, developing fetus and newborn. We will identify alterations in the status of the mother and the fetus and/or potential problems that could occur during the woman's childbearing experience. We will evaluate interventions and plan of care for the complicated perinatal patient using the latest standards of care and current evidence-based practice. All of this information will be presented through lecture, open discussion and review questions to assist the nurse in preparing for the NCC Examination in Inpatient Obstetric Nursing. Elements of the exam content will be discussed in addition to pertinent topics and discussion useful in current clinical practice. After taking this course, nurses will have a comprehensive study guide useful for preparing and reviewing for the NCC exam.
