ASGE Duodenoscope Reprocessing Update

Course Description

The transmission of infection via duodenoscopes is an increasingly recognized (and publicized) potential risk associated with the performance of ERCP. This course is designed to provide an in-depth discussion and update on the key issues of duodenoscope reprocessing that impact the entire GI team. Topics will include the key mechanisms of infection transmission and challenges associated with duodenoscope reprocessing, as well as current available evidence, best practices and potential future solutions to minimize the risk of infection transmission. In addition, messaging strategies for patients, other physicians, and the media regarding this issue will also be discussed.

Learning Objectives

Upon completion of this educational activity, participants will be able to:

- Identify the key causes and mechanisms associated with duodenoscope transmission of infections
- Apply current best practices for duodenoscope reprocessing
- Recognize potential future strategies and techniques to further minimize the risk of infection transmission during ERCP

Intended Audience

Practicing gastroenterologists and endoscopy unit staff involved in performing ERCP or duodenoscope reprocessing.
