

127TH ANNUAL SESSION
VAIL COLORADO - JUNE 5-7, 2014

You asked and we listened!

It is my pleasure to welcome you to the Colorado Dental Association's Annual Session, June 5-7, 2014 at the beautiful Vail Marriott Mountain Resort in Vail, CO.

Last year, Annual Session attendees graciously gave the CDA feedback and we take that seriously. This year, we're doing everything we can to make this annual meeting something that everyone can enjoy. Here's what we're doing:

You asked for more business and less formality in the House of Delegates. Check! The agenda cuts to the chase for more business to occur in the morning. Additionally, several reports will be made in written or video form to make better use of delegates' time.

You hinted that you needed a mid-day break to socialize rather than a formal luncheon with a podium. Check! Weather permitting, we'll be sitting outside for the Delegate's luncheon with a lighter summer meal, and time to move around and catch up with colleagues.

You asked for more CE. Check! This year we're offering a three-hour clinical track and a three-hour non-clinical track containing fresh topics and seven great speakers.

You reminded us that having a handful of organized recreational activities is worthwhile. Check! This year, we're excited to offer a homebrewing course all about craft beer. We also have a negotiated rate for our attendees to use the Vail Athletic Club. Back by popular demand, we have the Saturday 5K/1 mile fun run. And of course, I couldn't have an annual meeting without a golf tournament...BUT, this tournament is different than year's past. It will be at the exclusive Red Sky Golf Club in Wolcott, CO and proceeds from the tournament will benefit Kids in Need of Dentistry. Anyone can golf – while I hope you come for the entire Annual Session weekend, it is not a requirement to play in the tournament.

You told us that mountain getaways were preferred. Check! The Lionshead area of Vail is easily one of the most charming European-inspired resort destinations in Colorado. We've designed the Annual Session around walking. Once you arrive and park, you'll easily be able to ditch the car for the weekend and travel by foot or by the free local shuttle.

Lastly, you told us that you enjoyed camaraderie, networking with colleagues and catching up with friends. Check! In addition to the Welcome Wine and Cheese Reception, the continental breakfasts and the Delegates' Luncheon, there are plenty of fun party hopping opportunities on Friday night between the past president's reception, CU Alumni reception, Creighton Alumni gathering and New Dentist Committee networking event.

My motto is: work hard for the shortest time possible and play harder for the longest time possible! The CDA Annual Session is about business, uniting as a profession and collaborating with fellow dentists. Of course it doesn't hurt to enjoy a little fresh air in the beautiful Rocky Mountains either. Learn more about this meeting and register today at www.cdaonline.org/annualsession.

See you in Vail!

Cal Utke, D.D.S.
CDA President

Root Resorptions: What you need to know from diagnosis to treatment

Presented by: Robert Corr, D.D.S., M.S.
8:30-9:30 a.m.

Root resorption presents a significant challenge to dentists across all specialties. There are several varieties of resorption — each with different etiologic and morphological features, and each with different management strategies. Early diagnosis is important, but this is often difficult as clinical findings are many times absent and radiographic findings can be very subtle. Significant loss of tooth structure can progress occultly, leading to structural compromise or loss of teeth. This presentation will examine the etiologies, pathogenesis, and prognoses of the various categories of resorption, with a case-based review of possible treatment options.

Learning Objectives:

- Review the classifications of various resorptions
- Present the etiologic factors, pathogenesis and prognoses for the different resorptive processes
- Discuss how to better detect the clinical and radiographic features of resorption for earlier diagnosis
- Present various treatment options, and review clinical cases and outcomes

Orthodontic Retention: Why it matters to you and your general practice

Presented by: Matthew Gaworski, D.D.S.
9:30-10:30 a.m.

Everyone has heard of retainers and their association with orthodontic treatment, but questions like, "What type of retainer should I use?" "How often should I wear my retainer?" and "Do I really need to wear them forever?" can leave you struggling for an answer other than, "Gee, maybe you should ask an orthodontist about that."

This lecture is for dentists and hygienists who are actually front line players when it comes to retention and often do not even realize it. Get informed with current thinking on retention and see why a comprehensive retention program should be implemented and managed by the general dentist, hygienist, and the general dental team. It can increase your production with very little effort and you'll be doing a huge service for your patients.

Learning Objectives:

- Know and understand current concepts in retention
- Be able to identify the different types of retention and when they are indicated
- Understand the biology of tooth movement and the changes that occur necessitating retention
- Examine misconceptions regarding why teeth relapse after movement and the impact that aging has on tooth alignment
- Be able to implement a retention program in your office with your team

"Clenching" - The CO₂ connection

Presented by: Frank Seaman, D.D.S., M.S., and Roberto deGuevara, O.T.R., R.F.E.
10:30-11:30 a.m.

Poor breathing habits such as open mouth breathing results in low PCO₂ and could be one of the factors related with nocturnal clenching and bruxism. Poor breathing habits are a learned experience and can be corrected. Watch an uncongested baby breathe. Their lips are closed and they breathe with the rise and fall of their stomach. With time, this natural breathing pattern is interrupted, and other breathing habits are developed. Mouth breathing is one such habit that is very inefficient and results in poor CO₂ retention. The importance of pulmonary CO₂ retention will be explained as it relates to hypoxia and the brain's response to try and correct the problem. Clenching is one of these responses. Breathing efficiency can be improved with nasal breathing and slower deeper breathing patterns. Capnography can aid in this re-learning process.

Learning Objectives:

- Learn how mouth breathing leads to insufficient breathing patterns and nocturnal clenching
- Understand the importance of pulmonary CO₂ retention and how it helps with the transport of oxygen through the hemoglobin; the Bohr Effect
- Demonstrate the cascade of events that occurs with hypoxia and the brain's autonomic action to reverse it; the apneic event
- Learn what the ideal breathing pattern is, and how to achieve it with capnography biofeedback training

KABOOM! Explosive Practice Growth Through Science-Backed Marketing

Presented by: Wendy O'Donovan Phillips

8:30-9:30 a.m.

A successful practice knows exactly who they are, how their practice is different from all others and how to inspire their patients and community to become loyal to them. Take the guesswork out of marketing to increase patient traffic, patient loyalty, employee retention, production and profitability. This interactive presentation will shine the light on the four parts to a balanced marketing formula: brand, online, traditional and internal.

Learning Objectives:

- Use patient feedback to brand and market the practice online, offline and throughout the community
- Develop a foolproof 12-month marketing plan with easy step-by-step instructions
- Understand the do's and don'ts of Websites, online reviews, SEO, online advertising and social media
- Discern which traditional marketing tactics are most appropriate for the practice

The Rules and Regulations of Digital Imaging

Presented by: Brad Potter, D.D.S., M.S.

9:30-10:30 a.m.

With the acceptance and incorporation of digital radiographic imaging in dentistry, practitioners are now faced with challenges in patient record compliance and regulatory policies. These challenges include issues related to patient and staff safety, file formats, compression of images, sending images to colleagues and consults, HIPPA compliance, and state practice acts – just to mention a few. The purpose of this course will be to review the many challenges facing you and your staff as users of digital imaging, and to provide strategies to ensure compliance.

Learning Objectives:

- Identify the role of regulatory and advisory agencies in the development of office protocols for digital image acquisition, storage and transfer
- Identify key references and standards that can be useful in digital imaging
- Understand key regulations and rules that make it easier for dental professionals to communicate information digitally in a compliant way
- Describe how your dental office can use systems that implement standards-based criteria to allow the capability of sharing digital information with external entities for treatment, reimbursement and patient care

Finding the Vital Competitive Edge

Presented by: Janet Steward

10:30-11:30 a.m.

A recent Gallup poll showed that 87% of employees are unengaged in their work. How does your team stack up? Creating a congruent practice where you are focused as a leader and your team is committed to you, your vision and your patients is the new competitive edge.

Learning Objectives:

- Understand the nuts and bolts of becoming a leader your team wants to follow
- Learn how to engage your team
- Create the ultimate patient experience
