Large Vessel Vasculitis, Eosinophilic Granulomatosis with Polyangiitis (Churg-Strauss Syndrome), and Other Unique Vasculitides Symposium

May 1, 2013

InterContinental Hotel and Bank of America Conference Center
Cleveland, Ohio

Why Attend?

- Join a multi-disciplinary faculty of world leaders to discuss large vessel vasculitis and its unique features that influence the assessment of the disease.
- Create management strategies for patients with large vessel vasculitis and compare your management decisions with those of global experts.
- Discuss the clinical features and therapeutic options for eosinophilic granulomatosis with polyangiitis (Churg-Strauss Syndrome).
- Analyze the diagnosis and treatment of uncommon vasculitides and mimics, including primary angiitis of the CNS and polyarteritis nodosa.

Overview

Vasculitis is an often under-recognized group of diseases that can have diverse presentations and outcomes. Included within this challenging family of diseases are entities such as large vessel vasculitides, giant cell arteritis, and Takayasu's arteritis, eosinophilic granulomatosis with polyangiitis (Churg-Strauss syndrome), primary angiitis of the CNS, and polyarteritis nodosa. For clinical practitioners, each of these diseases raises important questions:

- What are the clinical features of the vasculitic disease and its associated symptoms?
- What tests are needed to establish a diagnosis of a specific form of vasculitis?
- What strategies should be used to assess disease activity?
- What treatment modalities are available for the management of the vasculitic disease?
- What diseases should be considered within the differential that could represent a mimic of vasculitis?

This educational symposium Large Vessel Vasculitis, Eosinophilic Granulomatosis with Polyangiitis (Churg-Strauss Syndrome), and Other Unique Vasculitides presents cutting-edge reviews and discussions of the latest knowledge regarding the clinical features, diagnostic methodology, monitoring, and treatment of patients with this diverse range of vasculitic diseases.

Join the Cleveland Clinic Center for Vasculitis Care and Research and the Richard J. Fasnmyer Center for Clinical Immunology for these outstanding presentations on vasculitis.

Objectives

- Describe the clinical features of large vessel vasculitis, eosinophilic granulomatosis with polyangiitis (Churg-Strauss Syndrome) (EGPA), and other unique vasculitides.
- Recognize the role of diagnostic imaging in diagnosis and monitoring of large vessel vasculitis, EGPA, and other unique vasculitides.
- Identify non-medical treatment modalities used in large vessel vasculitis.
- Describe the medical therapeutic options for the treatment of large vessel vasculitis, EGPA, and other unique vasculitides.
- Recognize the emerging role of biologic agents in the treatment of large vessel vasculitis, EGPA, and other unique vasculitides.

Target Audience

The Symposium is directed towards rheumatologists and rheumatology allied health practitioners, vascular physicians, neurologists, pulmonologists, allergists, hepatologists, ophthalmologists, and associated allied health practitioners interested in vasculitis.

Accreditation

The Cleveland Clinic Foundation Center for Continuing Education is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

The Cleveland Clinic Foundation Center for Continuing Education designates this live activity for a maximum of 6.75 AMA PRA Category 1 Credits™. Physicians should claim only the credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.

Participants claiming CME credit from this activity may submit the credit hours to the American Osteopathic Association for Category 2 credit.

Faculty Disclosure

The Cleveland Clinic Foundation Center for Continuing Education has implemented a policy to comply with the current Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education Standards for Commercial Support requiring resolution of all faculty conflicts of interest. Faculty declaring a relevant commercial interest will be identified in the activity syllabus.
