MD Anderson Onco-Nephrology Symposium 2016

| FOCUS |

Kidney disease is quite common in patients with cancer. As cancer treatments advance in efficacy and scope, the sequelae upon the kidney and bodily homeostasis become increasingly complex to diagnose and manage. There exists a very real need for nephrologists, oncologists and trainees to develop proficiency at recognizing and treating the unique renal syndromes that arise in the setting of cancer. MD Anderson is taking this opportunity to educate physicians about the subspecialty of Onco-Nephrology and believes this conference will teach health professionals about the salient challenges encountered at the intersection of Oncology and Nephrology.

EDUCATIONAL OBJECTIVES

After attending the conference, participants should be able to:

- Diagnose the common renal complications arising from cancer and its treatments (Knowledge, Competence);
- Recognize and treat electrolyte disorders in patients with cancer (Knowledge, Competence, Performance);
- Prevent or treat nephrotoxicity associated with cancer (Knowledge, Competence);
- Summarize the controversies in kidney function assessment and ESA use in the setting of cancer (Knowledge, Competence);
- Implement strategies for discussing dialysis at the end-of-life care (Knowledge, Competence, Performance, Patient Outcomes).
