*2018 Course Remark
"An excellent conference. I came from Central Illinois, and hope to be back next year."*

Overview

The Pancreas Symposium 2019 program will review current controversies and procedures for managing complex pancreatic disease, both benign and malignant. Acute and chronic pancreatitis, pancreatic cystic neoplasms and pancreatic cancer are among the most complex cases that physicians are confronted with as internists, gastroenterologists, oncologists, and surgeons. Our internationally recognized faculty will present lectures and case presentations to help practicing clinicians treat pancreatic disease.

We are proud to have this symposium co-sponsored by The National Pancreas Foundation.

Learning Objectives

- Discuss current evidence-based guidelines for the surgical and endoscopic management of acute pancreatitis
 - Explain how to diagnose and treat pancreatic insufficiency
 - Learn standard of care treatment algorithms for pancreatic adenocarcinoma, including surgery, chemotherapy and radiation therapy
 - Explore “new horizons” for improving survival in pancreatic adenocarcinoma, including when to consider clinical trials and immunotherapy
 - Discuss the diagnosis of chronic pancreatitis and when to refer patients for total pancreatectomy with autologous islet cell transplantation
 - Identify new and enhanced imaging techniques of the pancreas
 - Explain how to diagnose and manage autoimmune pancreatitis, pancreatic cystic neoplasms and incidentally found pancreatic neuroendocrine tumors
 - Describe the physiology of pain in pancreatitis
 - Identify new techniques in endoscopic ablation of select pancreatic lesions
 - Learn the role of genetics in pancreatic disease, both benign and malignant

Target Audience

This activity is designed for gastroenterologists, surgeons, internists, oncologists, radiologists, pathologists, RNs, PAs, NPs and other medical professionals involved in the evaluation, diagnosis and/or management of patients with benign and malignant pancreatic disease.
