IF YOU DON'T LEARN FROM IT

WELCOME TO ICCN 2017

DR. KEKI TUREL'S MESSAGE

Neurosurgery is an intricate field of medicine demanding not only exemplary surgical skills but also pre and intra op-decision making, all of which can have great impact on the patient's life.

Complications are an unfortunate part of surgery making the consequences of treatment worse than the original disease, bringing great suffering to the patient and his family, and tarnish the reputation of the surgeon and the specialty at large. The demands of our patients and their intolerance to any complication have both increased significantly, seemingly proportionate to the level of civilization. Complications may arise due to an error of execution, be related to the technology or tools employed, or simply to an insurmountable disease. It's often said, "It is better to stay out of complication than get out of complication", a reflection of a timeless adage, "Prevention is better than cure". The coin of complications has 2 sides, anticipation or prevention, and management.

Neurosurgery is a vast specialty with myriad subspecialties and rapidly evolving technology. Though fundamentals of anatomy, physiology, pathology and surgery remain the same, the mode of treatment is ever changing and progressively minimalistic. Modern technology ushers new adventurers and the inevitable 'learning curve' with its accompanying problems.

KEKI TUREL - CHAIRMAN, ICCN 2017

When dealing with the issue of 'Complications', on one hand there is scientific learning; while on the other hand there are ethical considerations and issues, philosophical aspects, moral obligations or probity, and legal implications.

All this makes the subject of 'Complications' very encompassing. Whilst most medical conferences deal with rather staid and conventional discussion of diseases, both common and uncommon, their superb management and results, with a slide on complications rushed in towards the end, very few have shown the fortitude to only discuss pitfalls of management and a confession of errors and mistakes. We need to shift from the 'How I do it' rhetoric to 'How I would not do it', or 'How I wish I had done it differently'.

Let this be an open forum of unabashed declaration of our failures and what we learnt and want to share with others on a level ground. No one need to talk about success, except, when having encountered the unexpected disaster, how one was able or unable to surmount it.

Such deliberations will be far more humbling and enriching than those indulging in boastful one-upmanship. Whilst we may savour success, we learn only from failures. Failure is part of many a success story and is a defeat only if you don't learn from it. That is the carry-home message!

ABOUT MUMBAI

Mumbai, the capital city of the state of Maharashtra which was initially a composite of seven marshy islands, is now a 3km wide and 22 km long wide strip where nearly 20 millions people reside. With a cosmopolitan nature, the city is the "melting pot" wherein Hindus, Jews, Muslims, Parsis, and Christians co-exist happily under the common designation, the 'Mumbaikars'. Presently Mumbai is the dream city for all, from businessmen to film stars, from designers to tycoons and not to forget the common people.

Mumbai is the entertainment as well as the commercial hub of India. Formerly known as Bombay and presently referred as the "Alpha World City", this exhilarating city of Mumbai is among the most populated cities in the world. Lying in the western coast of India, this glamorous city has a natural harbor.

Mumbai popularly known as the "city that never sleeps" generates 25% of India's industrial output, 5% of India's GDP, 70% of the total capital transactions that take place in the Indian economy and 40% of the maritime trade. Besides being the home to all major financial bodies, Mumbai also houses the popular Bollywood industry.

ABOUT BANDRA

Bandra is a suburb, located at north west part of Mumbai, adjacent to the Arabian sea. Originally a tiny fishing hamlet in 1534 AD, it has transformed spectacularly into a place, that now combines modern lifestyle and rich mixed British-Portuguese historical heritage. Various beautiful old architectural structures, delectable food options, urban art and its vibrant posh living are evident to this fact. The upbeat cosmopolitan culture, beautiful old and well preserved churches, highly popular restaurants, mouth watering street food, pulsating nightlife, shopping arcades, great connectivity, and most importantly the openness of the residents make Bandra truly a "Queen of Suburbs". No wonder it is a home to many celebrities and icons of repute. At Bandra, besides the academic programme, soak yourselves in great hospitality offered by Hotel Taj Lands End and immerse in a wonderful experience that Bandra has to offer.
