MEDICINE AT THE MET: ART IN CLINICAL PRACTICE

Join us for THE ART OF SEEING

New Workshop January 20th, 2017, from 6 to 8.30 pm and January 21st, 2017 from 5 to 7.30 pm

Learn how to use art to enhance your perceptual and communication skills in order to strengthen your clinical practice!

"Fantastic course. Therapeutic, informative and reformative."

"Very interesting and I think it'll make me a better doctor."

Open to all physicians, psychiatrists, residents, nurses, medicals students, and healthcare professionals across disciplines

January 20th from 6 to 8.30 pm: Enhancing Presence and Observation
Using art's formal elements as tools to deepen observation, participants move beyond tendencies towards generalization present in visual perception in order to develop crucial observational skills. In addition, participants explore links between presence and observation while examining their application in diagnostic and communication know-how.

January, 21st from 4 to 6.30 pm: Increasing Self-Awareness and Empathic Intelligence Working with associations and interpretations elicited from selected works, participants further a nuanced emotional and self-awareness and explore its impact on observation, engagement and communication skills.

Cost: $285 (includes 1/20/17 and 1/21/17 + museum entrance fee) $185 for students
Art experience is welcome but not necessary--Location: The MET Museum in NYC

Course leader: Anna Willieme, MFA, is the founder and director of ArtMed inSight. She is on the seminar faculty of Columbia University Medical Center and leads ArtMed inSight programs at leading medical institutions in Boston and New York City. Willieme has also been a lecturer at the Metropolitan Museum of Art for over ten years and is a visual artist with exhibition experience in galleries and public spaces in both the US and Europe.

Space is limited to insure interactivity! For more information and to register go to:
http://artmedinsight.org/?page_id=606