

Join Keystone Symposia
for the 2016 conference on:

Fibrosis: From Basic Mechanisms to Targeted Therapies

February 7–11, 2016

Keystone Resort | Keystone, Colorado | USA

Scientific Organizers: Robert Lafyatis, Paolo G.V. Martini, Dean Sheppard and Lucie Peduto

Joint with the conference on Stromal Cells in Immunity

This meeting aims to: 1) Present and discuss the most current and cutting-edge results regarding the mechanisms, signaling pathways, gene regulation, cells and tissues involved in fibrotic diseases and therapeutic approaches currently in development; 2) Include discussions and presentation of new ideas or paradigms that challenge existing models and expand on the knowledge of the current standard of care for fibrotic diseases; 3) Consider the future directions of the field, including the identification of the most pressing unanswered questions, the areas needing more focus, and those that would benefit from new approaches and methodologies developed and used in other related fields; 4) Stimulate collaborations in a setting conducive to focused, intense discussion among scientists with broad interests in fibrotic diseases and different targeted therapeutic approaches, including engagement with industrial partners interested in new targets in fibrotic disease; and 5) Provide a forum for trainees and new investigators to learn about current work in the field, to present their own work and to network with established investigators.

Session Topics:

- Stromal Cells in Inflammatory Disease (Joint)
- Metabolic Stress and Fibrogenesis
- Extracellular Matrix Composition and Stiffness in Regulation of Cell Phenotype
- Adaptive Immunity, TH2 and IL-13 Fibrosis
- Perivascular Mesenchymal Cells and Vascular Niches: Versatile Cells in Health and Disease
- Fibrotic Muscle Disease
- Immunity in Fibrotic Diseases
