Exenterative Surgery for Pelvic Cancers: Current Practices and Future Directions

Dear Colleagues,

For many years pelvic exenteration has been undertaken at the Royal Marsden. The most common indication is recurrent pelvic cancer in previously irradiated patients who in addition often have also had chemotherapy and pelvic surgery. Pelvic exenteration is performed with curative intent in almost all cases.

This two-day conference is devoted to the practice of exenterative surgery. Although, these operations are numerically a small part of the practice of colorectal, urological and gynaecological cancer surgeons, they are resource and labour-intensive, requiring long operating times, intensive care and long hospitalisation. Key considerations are case selection, and a well-planned and coordinated team approach involving diagnostic specialists, surgical specialists including plastic and reconstructive surgeons, anaesthetists and clinical nurse specialists. The balance is to maximise outcome in terms of survival but minimise the short and long term morbidity, maintaining or improving the patient's quality of life. The conference will highlight current practice, recent improvements and innovations and take an optimistic and realistic look at future directions.

We do hope you will be able to join us for this exciting and challenging event.

King regards

Conference Organiser,

The Royal Marsden Conference Team

The Royal Marsden Conference Team provides world-class medical conferences, study and training days for The Royal Marsden and other organisations.

In addition to organising and delivering our distinguished programme, we are an experienced and dedicated event management team, who organise conferences both at The Royal Marsden and at venues in London and across the UK. We exceed expectations by taking care of everything from venue sourcing, catering, and audio-visual requirements through to the production of professional and detailed delegate packs. Our team negotiates the best deals for events organisers on venue hire, sponsorship and advertising by using the contacts we've built up over the years.

We really do take the stress out of organising events, and can get involved as much or as little as you want. We also offer venue hire from our high profile facilities at The Royal Marsden in Chelsea.

We're proud to be part of The Royal Marsden and are always looking for ways to enhance the conference experience for delegates.

We're a team of specialists in conferences and events management.
