WHAT YOU WILL EXPERIENCE

As an attendee, you will have three days to network, learn and share ideas with industry leaders from across the country. Our lineup of speakers for the 32 educational sessions includes subject experts in the field of cosmetic surgery.

- You will enjoy keynote presentations and ground-breaking didactic sessions on the latest techniques and procedures in cosmetic surgery, some of which include: body contouring, face lift surgery, Brazilian butt lift, breast, rhinoplasty, liposuction surgery, skin rejuvenation, hair restoration, and male and female genitourinary.
- Mastery requires safety; this meeting will exude safety, especially, the safe adoption of new techniques into your armamentarium. Be on the lookout for lectures that will help you do so as well as those that focus on advocacy of your right to the safe practice of cosmetic surgery. The AACS is committed to fostering your ability to do so through its multiple advocacy programs, but also through high-quality education and advocacy teaching.
- There is a dedicated 2-day track for Practice Management and Allied Health. Section Chair Dr. Mark Mandell-Brown has curated rich content to elevate your business and solve new equations brought by the cosmetic boom.
- You'll want to make time in your schedule to visit the exhibit hall to see first-hand many new products and services on the market! And if you like, participate in our "Exhibitor Passport to Prizes" Game and have a chance to win excellent prizes!

We hope you will make plans to join us where cosmetic surgery practitioners from all over the world share new findings, new research, new techniques, new pearls, and new ideas. We have an exciting and packed event, and we look forward to welcoming you.

WEBSTER LECTURE

Jeffrey Alan Klein, MD, MPH

SESSION 16

Friday • February 10, 2023

9:00am

In 1985 Jeffrey A. Klein, MD invented the tumescent technique for local anesthesia consisting of dilute subcutaneous Tumescent Epinephrine Lidocaine (TEL) for bloodless painless liposuction totally by local anesthesia. In 1989 he developed the first sterile tumescent infiltration tubing for use with an off-the-shelf laboratory peristaltic pump, which permitted power-assisted subcutaneous infiltration of large volumes of TEL. In 1990 he founded HK Surgical, Inc., a surgical device company focused on tumescent drug delivery (TDD) of lidocaine and many other injectable drugs.

Jeff grew up surfing in San Clemente, California. When he graduated from UC Riverside (BA, Mathematics, 1967) he had saved $1000 which sustained him for the next 12 months. He hitchhiked to NYC, then worked on a freighter for passage to Europe. He studied in Paris for six months, and while there witnessed the May 1968 student protests and nationwide strike. While hitching through Europe, he was in Prague during the invasion by the Soviet Union. Upon returning to California, he studied at UCSD (MS, Mathematics, 1971). He was admitted to the first class of the UC Berkeley-UCSF Joint Medical Program (MD, 1972-1976). After an MPH degree UC Berkeley (Biostatistics 1977), he did Internal Medicine (UCLA, 1977-1980, FACP), an NIH Clinical Pharmacology research fellowship (UCSF, 1980-81) and Dermatology (UC Irvine, 1981-1984, FAAD), American Board of Cosmetic Surgery certification (1989), and subspecialty board certification in Mohs surgery (2021). He is a clinical professor of Dermatology at UC Irvine. At work he directs his dermatology practice, as well as HK Surgical, Inc., and his own randomized clinical trials. At home he is directed by Kathleen Hutton-Klein, MD (dermatologist) and their five children.
